The Business Department's Advanced Computer classes and various English classes will work together creatively on a collaborated unit lesson plan.

After reviewing and researching the curriculum on poetry and prose, select English classes will create their own original quilt block design based on their interpretation of Robert Frost's poem, Birches. They will create a rough draft design on paper to be graded and approved by the instructor. The English students will then team up with the business department. The students together will create the final design on the computer using the skills and knowledge learned by the business students to create a graphic design on the various desktop software programs. The final design will be printed on a special paper using an ink jet printer, which will then be transferred to the fabric. Once all quilting blocks are created, they will be sewn into a quilt and donated to the St. Jude Children's Research Hospital.

Results of the Project

The results are tremendous. The creation of something material that can be shared with the community (quilt) is not only rewarding to the students, but rewarding to those children who will utilize this end result. The teaming of students from the different academic subjects is invaluable. They apply real-life principles and understand how the different academic subjects and their education fit together.

They have created visually something from their own interpretation, which is a wonderful educational experience. The students even present the quilt to the St. Jude Children's Research Hospital and share the poem and their individual squares they created with the children.

We would highly recommend this project or lesson unit to be included in the curriculum for Business and English throughout any school system.

GENERAL PROCEDURES AND/OR ACTIVITIES:

1. English students will be grouped and given a list of vocabulary terms pertaining to the unit in which they are reviewing.
2. Introduction of Unit plan is given to students (review handout).

4. ACIS students will examine vocabulary research done with English students and together begin layout design of quilting square.
5. English and ACIS students will work together to plan their final layout and design.
6. ACIS students will begin construction and converse with English students as needed. Deadlines will be set.
7. Completed layouts will be turned in and assessed, then students will transfer layouts to special paper and apply to fabric squares. (They will be given to the Work and Family Studies students to sew together and make a quilt.)
8. Evaluation and observation of project will be done by each student and select students will go to Children's Hospital of the Kings Daughters to present quilt.
